BIOGRAPHY

Scott J. Smith, P.E., is the Midwest Regional Director for Lochmueller Group, Inc. where he leads a talented team of engineers, planners and scientists in offices across Missouri, Kansas and Illinois. As a Professional Engineer and Principal at Lochmueller Group, he helps communities and clients reinvent their future through thoughtful, actionable professional engineering services. In addition, he continues to administer numerous municipal and private civil engineering design related improvement projects. He has been involved in all phases of projects including fee negotiation, design, plan and specification preparation, cost estimating, quality assurance, bidding and construction administration. Before arriving at Lochmueller Group, he spent fourteen years with the cities of Florissant and Wentzville, Missouri as City Engineer and Director of Public Works respectively. His tenure with these public agencies provided experience presenting to city councils and public works department committees demonstrating his ability to communicate complex subjects effectively while building consensus. Scott is a graduate of the University of Nebraska with a Bachelor of Science degree in Civil Engineering and is a registered Professional Engineer in Missouri. Scott also holds a master's degree in public administration with a certification in Geographic Information Systems from St. Louis University. He has been a member of ACEC Missouri since 2012. In addition to ACEC Missouri, he is an active member of the American Public Works Association, American Society of Civil Engineers, and the Engineers' Club of St. Louis where he served as President from 2018-2019. He received the 2024 Outstanding Professional Engineer of the Year in Private Practice from the Missouri Society of Professional Engineers.

Scott and his wife, Janet, live in the City of Saint Charles where they enjoy getting together with friends and family, being young grandparents, and surprising each other with staycations on their birthdays.
